

FIGHTING IN DUBLIN OVER; REBEL LEADER IS CAPTURED

Irregulars Kept Up Warfare Despite Flames

WHITE FLAG UP

Cathal Brugha Taken Prisoner By State Troops

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 5.—The battle of Dublin is drawing to a close with a huge conflagration in Backville Street. An 18-pounder at seven o'clock this morning resumed the bombardment at close range and at the same time the stronghold was machine-gunned by armored cars in the streets and by Lewis guns from the buildings opposite. Soon the flames poured out of Hamman's Hotel spread to the Hibernian Hotel, the premises, the tramway offices and the Gresham Hotel. The irregulars maintained their resistance. A white flag was hoisted on the roof adjoining Hamman's Hotel in the midst of the conflagration but the troops advancing on it went on firing and the white flag was withdrawn and operations were resumed. Snipers are again troublesome in various parts of the city.

London, July 5.—The last stands of the Dublin irregulars are now occurring, though the battle continues with varying intensity. Hamman Hotel has been set on fire and the garrison has surrendered.

Countess Markievicz, who is the leader of a group of women snipers, is reported to have been captured. No information can be obtained as to the whereabouts of De Valera, who is thought to be in hiding in the city.

The National forces this afternoon recaptured the O'Connell Street Post Office, taking twenty prisoners.

Later an 18-pounder gun was brought up and bombarded the remaining positions of the irregulars, who are isolated in three hotels, the Gresham, the Granville and the Crown.

These were shelled from a range of 150 yards and are partially wrecked.

An officer of the National Army has arrived at Croynodon for the purpose of proceeding to Dublin with a Bristol fighting-plane but it is doubtful whether the irregulars will hold out much longer.

London, July 5, 8:55 p.m.—The remainder of the irregulars in O'Connell Street have surrendered. Mr. Cathal Brugha has been taken prisoner.

New Law Enmeshes Italian Convicted Of Owing Opium

Under a recently enacted Italian law the first conviction recorded in the Italian Consular Court here for possession of opium was found Wednesday when M. Pavich of 114 Avenue Joffre was fined Lire 300 for being in possession of 45 pounds of the drug. The sentence was imposed by Italian Consul-General de Rossi.

It is stated that the new law under which Pavich was sentenced remedies a need here, as for the first time it makes possession of the drug illegal.

The Consul-General announced the receipt in Shanghai of copies of the new law, which was passed last October, during the trial.

Because of the absence from the Italian statutes of any such law Italian subjects have previously been immune from arrest for having opium in their possession.

French Delegate Believes Agreement Impossible

(Reuter's Service)

The Hague, July 5.—Matters are at present at a deadlock. The non-Russian delegates maintain that it is for the Russians to produce an explanation of the fantastic figures presented last week, while the Russians declare that they have nothing more to say. They have given all the information required, but the other side has refused this information.

M. Alphand, a French delegate, interviewed by Reuter's correspondent, said that he believed that an agreement was impossible. The only satisfactory feature so far was an indication that the Russians were abandoning some Communist principles.

Boatswain Drowned Saving Companion

Jacob Kelly, boatswain of the steamer Achilles and a veteran seaman of the Blue Funnel Line, who drowned after he had succeeded in rescuing a fellow seaman from the Whangpoo, lost his life in the manner described in earlier published reports of the tragedy, according to a verdict given yesterday following an inquest before Mr. G. W. King, British Magistrate, sitting as Coroner.

Kelly and two men from the Achilles were on their way back to the ship about midnight on June 28. When they reached Holt's wharf, Pootung, one of the men fell from the pontoon into the water and when Kelly lying prone sought to pull him out the boatswain himself was dragged into the water.

A Chinese watchman who was attracted to the scene was able with the aid of the third seaman to save the first man who had gone into the water by means of a long bamboo pole. The boatswain sank, however, and the body was recovered a day later.

SUN AWAITING EVENTUALITIES IN THE SOUTH

Canton Leader Will Await Outcome Of Expected Clash

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 3.—It is reported from Canton that General Hsu Chung-chih has in obedience to Dr. Sun Yat-sen's instructions, ordered his troops, numbering about 10,000, to leave Kanchow for Canton. General Li Pu-ling is going with them.

It is rumored in the south that this hope of assistance has stiffened Dr. Sun in his attitude towards General Chen Ching-ming prompting him to insist on more generous terms of peace.

It is even suggested that he may await the issue of a clash between General Chen Ching-ming's troops and those of General Hsu before finally deciding his future course.

It is now stated that reports of a definite understanding between General Wu Pei-fu and General Chen Ching-ming are exaggerated. They have, it is said, not gone much further than an interchange of views in which distinct differences of opinion developed.

Apparently General Wu Pei-fu favors a centralization of authority in the Peking Government while General Chen is anxious to see the establishment in China of a federation of autonomous provinces.

In the event of a breach with General Wu it is stated that General Chen will seek to bring about a new Southern Confederacy comprising the provinces of Chekiang, Fukien, Hunan, Szechuen, Yunnan, Kwangtung and Kiangsu.

He is said to be consulting with General Lu Yung-shiang on this subject at the present time.

PASTOR MISSING

Cholera Reported Among Soldiers At Kiu-kiang

(China Press, Canton-Aden)

Nanchang, Kiangsi, July 3.—Authentic information has been received by the Methodist Mission here that buildings and chapels of three Methodist mission outposts located between Changshu and Kianfu were wholly destroyed after having been looted in the recent uprising of several thousand mutinous soldiers. The message says that one Chinese pastor has been missing since the outbreak and the belief is held that he may have been killed.

No foreign missionaries were stationed at the three mission centers that fell before the onslaught of the mutinous soldiers and it is stated that there were no foreign residents in the districts in which they were located. The message received by the Methodist Mission fails to give any estimate of the loss of life suffered in the uprising or the extent of the property loss.

The troops that caused the outbreak originally near Kianfu are said to be forces of the former Tuchun who fled upon the approach of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, but it is reported that when the outbreak reached its height Kiangsi bands took advantage of the situation and operating in great bands spread the terror all over the mutiny of the soldiers.

It is definitely established here that cholera has broken out among the Chinese soldiers. One case, that of a soldier who came from Kiu-kiang is now in the Nanchang hospital and Doctor Ferkus has reported that seventeen cases are under treatment at Kiu-kiang.

Japanese May Defer Removal Of Post Offices

Decision To Be Held Up Pending Arrival Of Expert

Why Shanghai needs a museum of arts and sciences was explained yesterday by the well-known scientist Mr. Arthur de C. Sowerby in an interesting address that he gave before the Shanghai Rotary Club at a meeting held at the Union Club.

The speaker asserted that Shanghai is the only city of its size in the world that has no such facilities for the public and remarked that the Royal Asiatic Society, while noted the world over for its splendid work, is hampered because it is a private organization without sufficient funds to carry on the necessary program. "The Royal Asiatic Society is unable to maintain a curator and the work just cannot be done," Mr. de Sowerby said.

The speaker prefaced his remarks with an interesting discussion of China's contributions for the naturalist. He told of the varied and wondrous botanical and zoological specimens found in this country and said that China has given practically every variety of flower and fruit to the Western world.

"China gave up the nomadic life early and settled down to become an agricultural people," he said. "They brought into cultivation thousands of varieties of wild plants and subsequently gave these to the Western world. China is even greater zoologically speaking and we find even now animals which date from prehistoric times."

Mr. de Sowerby also designated China as the headquarters of the pheasant family and said that there were more species of pheasant here than in all the rest of the world together. The speaker took occasion here to pay his respects to the business men exporting game in cold storage, charging that the Yangtze region has been practically stripped of pheasant.

Mr. de Sowerby told how the entomologist and business man co-operates, the entomologist determining the parasite which will prey on insects or blights or other plant pests.

BY JOSEF W. HALL

Staff Correspondent of the China Press

Peking, July 6.—Professor W. Willoughby, adviser to the Chinese delegation at the Washington Conference, has been invited to proceed immediately to Peking to assist Dr. Wellington Koo in working out a financial scheme. Mr. Willoughby is now in Washington.

Tung Kang, in sanctioning this appointment, said that China's financial situation is admittedly grave, and added that it might be necessary for the Peking government to borrow $15,000,000 from the Chinese and foreign banks in China, giving them control of the wine and tobacco bureau and some other public revenues pending repayment, which he estimates would be in six months.

Professor W. W. Willoughby is head of the political science department at Johns Hopkins university, and is recognized as one of the leading political economists in America. He served for some time as legal adviser of the Chinese government at Peking, and was chief adviser of the Chinese delegation at the Washington Conference. He has written several books on political questions, his latest one published only a few months ago, being a volume on foreign rights in China.

Inquiry Ordered In Sudden Rise In Price Of Rice

General Ho Feng-lin, defense commissioner of Shanghai and Sungkiang, has ordered an inquiry into the sudden rise in the price of rice here, according to reports in the Chinese press.

The price recently jumped from $14.00 per picul to $14.70. Although some 800,000 piculs have been imported from rice-producing centers in the South, this has been largely exported to other parts of China because the Shanghai Chinese are not accustomed to eating it. It is reported that some big rice merchants are holding on to their stocks, and two dealers in Shanghai are said to have 20,000 piculs on hand which they decline to sell.

A NEW PICTURE OF THE ELEMENTS IS BEING PAINTED

A new picture of the elements is being painted. Two simple units, the positive and the negative electron, are the only components of the myriads of complicated substances in the world about us. Dr. W. B. Whitney, director, research laboratory, General Electric Company, in a publication of the Engineering Foundation to be issued soon, explains man's new conception of stuff and the simplification of the idea of seventy or eighty distinct atoms.

Such names as electrons and atomic structure do not convey to the mind inherent relationship with radio, radium and X-rays; but a proper view of matter as it is now understood can most readily be pictured by getting the connection among some such group of present-day subjects, says Dr. Whitney. We are now forced to look at all matter as composed of identical, small, electrical charges, which determine the nature of chemical elements and compounds, by their numbers and arrangements. An atom—the ultimate particle of a particular substance—becomes more like a solar system than like a solid. The volume of the atomic space is mainly unoccupied, but through it the forces act which are attributable to electric charges within.

Bequerel, who found that a certain uranium ore emitted an invisible ray capable of passing through black paper and still affecting a photographic plate, was partly responsible for our new views. Soon afterward the Curies discovered radium, and this was shown later to be a naturally decomposing atom. Several other decaying elements were also found. During decomposition small electrical quantities were continually discharged.

Similar discharges had already been observed in other fields, but were not understood. For example, when the filament of a lamp is heated in a high vacuum, negative electrical charges are emitted and current thus crosses the empty space. This had early been noticed by Edison. It was not until after discovery of radium that the true nature of these "electrons" was perceived.

When these little units of negative electricity flow within a wire they constitute the electric current. When, by high temperature, they are emitted from a metal, they are called thermions. When they pass through a gas with sufficient velocity their impacts decompose molecules, and the greatly augmented flow of the resulting charged particles produces the common electric arc. When they flow through a vacuum space, under the influence of a high electric force, they are called cathode rays. When their motion is stopped by impact in the surface of a solid, the sudden change of motion starts an electromagnetic wave, an X-ray (just as a drumbeat sets up a sound wave in air), and when they surge up and down a wireless antenna, they produce the long wireless waves through space.

When constituent electrons are arranged in the groups called atoms, all properties seem determined merely by geography, or orientation. Apparently such old established things as chemical activity and valence are due to the number of electrons which occupy the outer surfaces of the groups. The shooting electrons of the cathode ray, stopped by the platinum or tungsten target, produce the X-rays, which by reflection in crystallized matter, disclose its atomic arrangement and thus lead to better understanding of many physical properties.

Japan Renews Demand For Protection From Bandits

(Eastern News Agency)
Peking, July 6.—Apropos of the Toutsakow incident, Mr. Ohata, Japanese Minister to Peking, as previously reported, on June 30 gave a warning to the Waichiaopu. The Japanese Minister yesterday gave another warning to the Waichiaopu, which reads as follows:

"In view of the mounted bandits' attack on the district of Hunchun in September 1920, and as there was also fear of the recurrence of the similar incident, the Consul General for Japan at Chientao gave a strict warning to the authorities. Accordingly, the Chinese authorities concerned made an announcement that they would take it upon themselves to guard against any future attack by testing Japanese residents, was compelled, as a proper measure of self-defence, to take such emergency steps as to despatch troops there, and peace and order in the menaced area of Shientao was once more restored.

ASK REMOVAL

Hereupon, the Chinese Government made a proposal to the Japanese Government requesting that the Japanese troops be withdrawn on condition that Chinese police-guards were to be stationed at all important points so that sufficient defences might be maintained for the protection of Japanese residents.

In reply, the Japanese Government, in November of the same year, suggested to the Chinese Government the withdrawal of Japanese troops from the menaced area, provided the latter recognised the following three conditions, (1) that pending the complete recovery of peace and order there, the Chinese Government should increase the military strength there, (2) that special attention should be paid to the protection of Japanese residents, and (3) that in case of recurrence of similar incidents in future and the Chinese Government failed to take measures according to circumstances, the Imperial Government of Japan should be allowed to act as the occasion required by again despatching troops to the menaced district.

In replying to the foregoing, the Chinese Government announced that for the maintenance of peace and order in the local district as well as the protection of lives and property of Japanese residents the Chinese Government was as a matter of course responsible and that inasmuch as troops required for such purposes were to be reinforced in order to maintain peace and order completely and to prevent like incidents from happening again, the proposed despatch of Japanese troops could not be complied with.

In view of the past bitter experiences, however, the Japanese Government, feeling for granted that the protection of Japanese residents could not be entirely left in the hands of the Chinese authorities concerned, carried out the withdrawal of the Japanese troops from the district of Hunchun in April, 1921, after making an announcement to the effect that a number of Japanese police-officers were to be stationed at important points and that in the event of emergencies in the future Japanese troops would be despatched at any time.

TROOPS KEPT THERE

Afterwards, the Chinese Government asked the Japanese Government more than once for the withdrawal of the Japanese police-officers just the same as they did for the withdrawal of Japanese troops, but the Japanese Government, after careful consideration, did not comply with the demand, though of course it did not disregard the guarantee given by the Chinese Government for the full protection of lives and property of Japanese residents in that district. And as was expected, the Toutsakow affair has arisen. This fact has entirely offset the frequent announcements by the Chinese Government, a matter which proves that Chinese troops or guards in that district are absolutely incapable of protecting Japanese residents there.

Unless, therefore, the Chinese Government takes some effective steps forthwith to prevent the recurrence of similar incidents in future, the Imperial Government of Japan will be forced to despatch troops once more, against its will, in order to discharge its duties of protecting Japanese residents. It is therefore to be hoped that the Chinese Government will take measures at this juncture to prevent similar incidents. With regard to the damages done to the lives and property of Japanese residents and to the Branch at Toutsakow, the Japanese Consul-General, the Government of Japan will demand a reasonable indemnity of the Chinese Government after making full investigations.

Paintings By Spirits Are Like The Ordinary Kind

Conan Doyle Is Certain Exhibits Could Easily Be Genuine; One In Blake's Style

New York, June 16.—Artists appearance are somewhat akin to long dead return to earth to perpetuate their art through sensitive mediums, guiding their fingers, so that remarkable paintings are produced and new techniques evolved by persons totally unfettered in painting and drawing and helpless without the domination of spirit control.

This statement, superficially at least, would seem to be the only answer to the group of spirit-control paintings and drawings collected at the Anderson Galleries by spiritists and shown at several private exhibitions, one of which was attended by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The exhibition will be opened to public view.

After spending an hour at the gallery inspecting the paintings and talking with those who executed them, Sir Arthur said:

"I was much interested in the spirit pictures. Of course, not having investigated the matter, I cannot tell how much of this work is due to spirit control. I see no reason, however, why the genuineness of these pictures should be doubted."

"There is no doubt about the ability of artists who have gone before to continue their work through a sensitive medium."

ALL DENY ANY ABILITY

There is nothing eerie or weird about the pictures, nor anything to suggest, except in one case, that they might not have been painted by artists of undoubted skill, and yet the "painters" without exception disclaim the slightest shred of ability and admit freely a total lack of training and experience in pictorial drawing.

The most interesting part of the exhibition is a group of landscapes painted by Frederic Lewis Thompson on an island off the New England coast while under the domination of R. Swain Gifford. The authenticity of these paintings is guaranteed by the Psychological Research Society which secretly investigated Mr. Thompson's case under the direction of Dr. John H. Hyslop.

After emerging from the obsession which seized him soon after the death of Mr. Gifford, say those responsible for the exhibition, Mr. Thompson became a well known painter under his own initiative, repudiating his earlier paintings and refusing to lend his name to anything tinged with psychic pretensions.

Gifford died January 15, 1905. Six months later, according to the psychical report, Thompson was suddenly mastered by an overwhelming desire to paint, although up to that time he had been a goldsmith. Through sketches by Thompson Dr. Hyslop located an island off the Maine Coast where Gifford had painted for years.

LIKE BLAKELOCK'S WORK

Friends of Thompson provide him with funds, erected a shack upon the shore and turned him loose with brush and easel. His paintings at the Anderson Galleries show a mastery of technique and in appearance are somewhat akin to the works of Ralph Blakelock. One dealer who witnessed the exhibition said they undoubtedly could command high prices in the market.

Very different from Mr. Thompson's conventional landscapes are the fantastic "astral" paintings of Miss F. Marjorie Spoor. Artists who viewed her paintings were mystified about how she produced the curious and weird effects—flowers and other objects apparently having been built out solidly to as much as an inch in air. Dr. Walter Franklin Prince, president of the Psychological Research Society, vouches for the fact that Miss Spoor's work is done under spirit control. After the death of her mother she began to develop a sudden drawing ability and soon produced with an incredible swiftness a series of highly colored and imaginative water color drawings. Later she took up oil painting and under the guidance of a "spirit group" of artists produced unusual results.

Miss Spoor said she could not identify her controls, but regarded them as a sort of "committee" presiding over her work. Miss Spoor is to attempt to give an exhibition of the manner in which her pictures are produced at a private gathering at the Anderson Galleries.

HAS XVI CENTURY TASTE

Mrs. Helen Wells of 809 West 128th street exhibited drawings executed in the fashion of the sixteenth century. She chatted pleasantly about her work and admitted her total ignorance of art.

"I couldn't duplicate them if I were to be shot," said Mrs. Wells. "I feel as though I had taken hold of an electric battery when the automatic drawing begins, and from that on I am perfectly unconscious of what is being placed on the paper. Often I do not look at them until they are finished, drawing as I read or talk with my friends."

Mrs. Wells summoned the spirit of a relative who had been killed in the civil war after having been graduated from the University of Michigan. She wanted to know if anybody would like to ask any questions. One of the reporters who was familiar with the university asked for the name of one of the college songs of that period. The pencil which Mrs. Wells held wrote clearly: "The Bullfrogs on the Bank." The reporter admitted having heard his brother sing the words many years ago. The song is well known among almost all college men.

Gen. Chen Chung-ming has arrived at Shihshing and was on his way to Canton when he received a letter from his representative Teng at Nanking which stated that Li Yuan-hung and Wu Pei-fu had refused to send him military assistance. As a result he postponed his visit.

Liang Hung-kai and Li Fook-jum's troops are on their way to Waichew via Yungshien. Chen Chung-ming has sent his brother and Li Bing-wing to cut off their progress.

Reports that President Sun Yat-sen had demanded $1,000,000 to leave Canton are groundless and is propaganda on the part of Chen Chung-ming's agents.

Mr. Tang Shao-yi has refused to support Gen. Chen Chung-ming and become Civil Governor of Kuangtung at the present time.

As Chen Chung-ming's troops have been suffering reverses at the hands of the armies of President Sun Yat-sen, a number of his commanders and their families have already fled to Hongkong while others are following.

News received here from Shihshing is to the effect that Chen's forces have suffered heavy defeats at the hands of the anti-northern armies, and one of his commanders has been forced to return to Canton as a result of serious wounds received.

FRENCH REMAIN INDIFFERENT TO RUSS PROPOSALS

One Newspaper Advocates Non-Participation At The Hague

(Rosa News Agency)

Moscow, June 26.—Mr. Lloyd George, British delegate to The Hague, has said to correspondents that the whole success of the conference depends on business circles. If an agreement with Russia, permitting investment of money in Russia, be attained, then a big "job" will be achieved.

Mr. Aretano, Italian delegate to The Hague, in his speech at the Italian Senate said that Russia's entrance into the European life was closely connected with the economic revival not only of Russia but also of all of Europe. "We are going to The Hague in the hope of reaching an agreement with Russia," said he.

"The sole object of the Hague Conference," says the "Manchester Guardian," is to be centered on the means of reestablishing economic relations with Russia with the participation of Russians themselves. The paper declares that "if France refuses to attend the conference, we can do without her."

The "Matin" commenting on the arrival of the Russian delegates, Messrs. Krassin, Litvinoff and Makovsky, at The Hague, supposed that England will follow her own policy independent of France. This policy will be in line with Soviet Russia's intentions, as the Russian market is very important for the British trade. The best way for France is not to participate in the conference, says the paper.

Challenge Lately Issued By Nick Boyle Is Accepted
By Shanghai Boxer

Replying to a challenge recently made public by Nick Boyle, an Australian scrapper of the light-weight division, who announced that he was willing to fight at 135 pounds and give any Shanghai opponent as much as 20 pounds, J. J. Corbett, a local welterweight, has come forward expressing complete willingness to meet the challenger.

In doing this Corbett said he would agree to any terms Boyle might desire to impose in the matter of the number and length of rounds, weight of gloves and other conditions and he said he wished to emphasize that he would agree to make 135 pounds on the day of the bout, intimating further that a side bet of proportions could be arranged. Boyle, it is said, acquired the pugilistic art under Jimmy Chabby and is credited with a long list of battles with contenders of note in the Antipodes. Some portion of his laurels were acquired in the Philippines and he was one of those who took part in a creditable manner in the recent Jiu-Jitsu boxing tournament at the Town Hall.

Toussaint Victor In One Set Of Singles Over California Star

Shanghai Man Manages To Score Win, But Is Defeated Finally, Three Sets to One

The University of California tennis team played the French club yesterday afternoon. The match was played on the hard courts. The feature match between Bates and Toussaint brought out the best tennis so far seen. Bates won three sets to one, but the match was close enough to make one think that if Toussaint had been a few years younger the result might have been different.

Bates started serving. He double faulted and then won the next four points on an out, an ace, a placement and a net. Toussaint got the second game on Bates' errors. Bates won his second serve making it 2-1. Toussaint made it two aces, still on Bates' errors. Toussaint was having difficulty handling Bates' serves and netted three returns. A placement by Bates made it 3-2 in Bates' favor. Toussaint got his serve. An out, a smash, a net, and an out made it 3 all. Bates won the seventh game in spite of his two double faults, 4-3. Bates took Toussaint's service for a love game on a double, a net, and two beautiful placements, 5-3. Bates was very wild and Toussaint made it 5-4. Bates won the set, thanks to four errors by Toussaint, 6-4.

	Bates	Toussaint
Outs	9	3
Nets	10	15
Double faults	4	1
Service aces	2	1
Placements	6	2
Passes	1	1

SECOND SET
Toussaint surprised the gallery by taking the set rather easily. Bates was very wild, but Toussaint was playing extremely good tennis and deserved to win. Toussaint came to the net frequently and served repeatedly with well placed smashes. He volleyed Bates' hard hit drives cleverly and won 6-2.

	BATES	TOUSSAINT
Outs	16	7
Nets	14	3
Double faults	0	2
Service aces	2	0
Placements	7	4
Passes	0	1

THIRD SET
Bates evidently did not like losing the second set and set out to win quickly. He played the best tennis he has shown in Shanghai and won easily 6-1. There were only two deuce games in the set and Bates won on earned points. He hit harder and deeper than before and put away anything he went after at the net.

	BATES	TOUSSAINT
Outs	5	7
Nets	9	9
Double faults	1	2
Service aces	2	0
Placements	9	5

FOURTH SET
It looked as if Toussaint was through. Apparently the years he was giving Bates were a little too much for him and everyone expected Bates to run through for set and match very easily. As a matter of fact, it turned out to be the best of the match, and Bates just managed to win 9-7. Toussaint was still coming to the net on his serve at the end and finished strong. Toussaint made Bates do most of the running and while the point score shows a good many nets and outs a large number of these were made because both men had to hit the ball while on the run and from extremely bad angles. It was good tennis.

	Toussaint	Bates
Outs	22	20
Nets	16	15
Double faults	3	4
Service aces	2	0
Placements	14	10
Passes	3	3

New York, July 5.—J. S. Cosden has purchased from the Sanford Stable the three-year-old colt, Snob 2d, for a reported price of $80,000. The colt is a Prestige—Mary Dora product, which recently won the Stuyvesant at the Jamaica course.

SAYS 'BUGS' Baer: GINK WAS MAN OF HIS WORD

But His Word Was That Noble Example Of The Dictionary Business—"Caution"

BY "BUGS" BAER

Hey—Gink Foster was such an awful double-barreled liar that he painted when he saw a hatchet or a cherry tree. My man Tuffy Tuffer lived in Tuffville, where a grovel and a grunt were considered new and goodbyes.

Tuffy challenged Gink right unseen, a time, and a place were set where a verbal agreement was established. It was at this meeting that Gink had his non-reversible decision patented.

Gink's early experience as first mate to a magician helped him in many places when he wanted to get to other places. He avoided Tuffy like ants avoid a pond.

HEY. Tuffy played in the Dinner Pail League, where everybody were second-handed uniforms and carried their own meals.

Gink was official surviving umpire, and started the season by blowing a police whistle.

Every game played was a benefit for the umpire's relatives. There were many attempts to shake Gink off the wharf but he was healthy and fat on empty plates.

This Tuffy business was boosted as a slugger, but his best knuckles bounced off Gink's chin without waking Gink up.

After one punch on the jaw Gink was impervious to punishment. That was why he was champion of Roughtown. Every spank only made him doze better and he awoke considerably refreshed.

Every player in the league wore boxing gloves in the field. Every player wore a catcher's mask. The first decision made was the signal to switch the game into a long distance panic. Knuckles were trumps.

The crowd was so big at the sixth opening game that they were using ropes in the outfield. Gink looked at the ropes and knew that he was going to have neck trouble.

The pitcher had two and three on the home batter. Then he made it six and five. But the batter was waiting for a better price. When everything was even up at seven and eleven, Gink walked the batter. Then the crowd walked Gink down a plank.

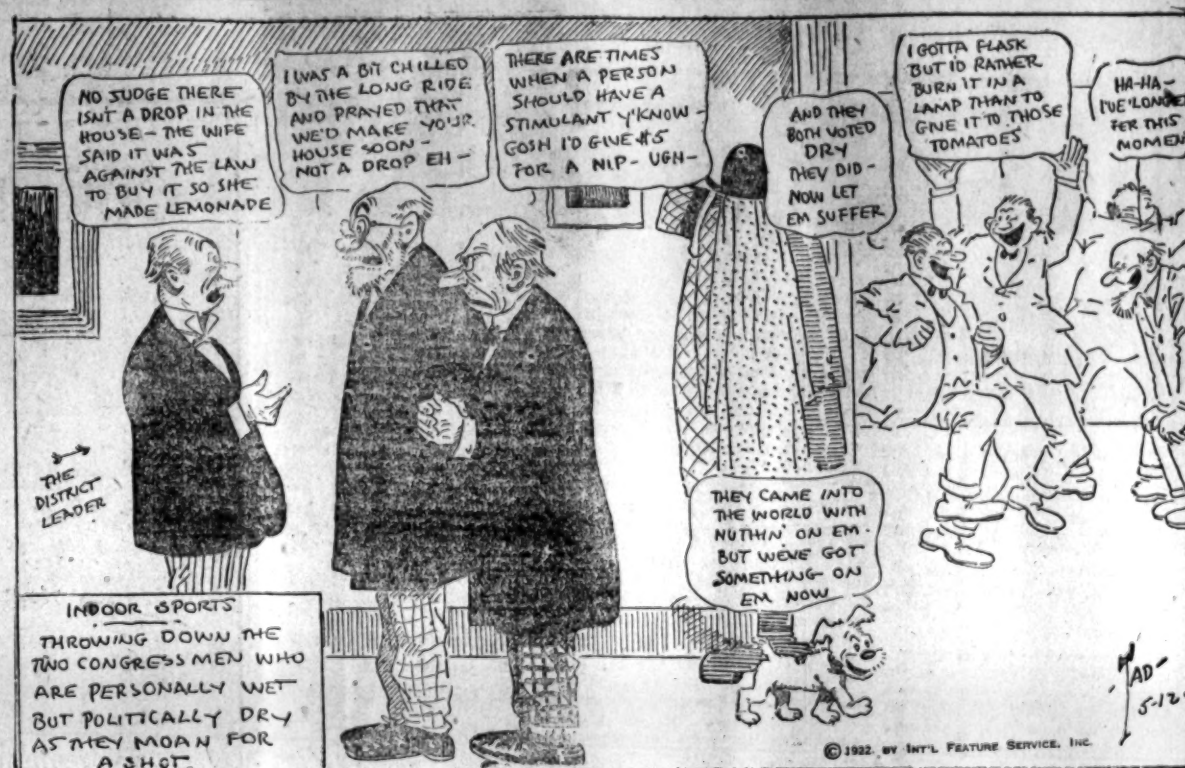

Gink started to lead the league. He kept one jump in the front with his coat-tails steering him like a rudder.

Judge Hibbs, the league president, fined everybody $29,000 for fishing without a hook and line.

Gink was suspended for thirty days. If nobody called for him in that time, the league wasn't responsible for laundry.

Roughtown claimed the pennant which was a yellow quarantine flag.

Echoes From The News In All Parts Of The World

Dempsey, champion of the boxing world, on setting foot in France, uttered a few words in a vigorous, direct language.

"The style is the man," says James de Cloquet in "Figaro." Dempsey summed up his impressions of France thus:

"I have just drunk a glass of wine. It is excellent. I don't think this could hurt any one."

"Great! This will perhaps give the death blow to the American dry system. More than the speeches of the politicians, more than the articles of the hygienists and the lectures of the temperance societies, the word of a world champion influences the masses. It prevails against all. Tomorrow wine will flow in torrents in free America, because Dempsey has declared before twenty persons in a railroad station, that 'This could not hurt any person.'"

"It is certain that a man such as he much know what is good for the health. But it is not this particular competency that gives weight and authority to his opinions. No. He is heard sojey because he is famous. If it were said: 'One should wear marsh-mallows suspenders with a brown suit' this fashion would have been launched."

"Celebrity has considerable influence on the public. Smart merchants have understood it and profited by it. The multitude like to know the tastes of famous people, and follow them blindly. The tooth powder which a vedette of the music hall uses daily is said to be superior to all other and one cannot have a becoming flat if it is not of the latter of a head of the state."

"We do not follow the prescription of our doctor, but we hear the advice of a cyclist champion in matters of hygiene. If it were to occur to Dempsey to declare that an elegant man must wear his hair in curls, all the pupils of rhetoric who have pretensions to dandyism would immediately try to realize this capillary ordinance."

"We have had a narrow escape! Suppose Jack Dempsey had a sense of smell less sensitive to the bouquet of a French wine. He would then have pronounced himself against it and the dry regime would also be decreed with us."

"We can now understand the formidable role which Cleopatra's nose could play, if it were only to launch a beauty parlor."

ANCIENT HOUSING DISTRESS

Housing distress is no new thing. It is as old as the history of human habitation. In Phoenicia and the ancient Orient the price of building lot must have been high. Still worse were matters in ancient Rome. Especially in the time of the emperors people flocked there from all parts of the vast empire, and as there were no transportation facilities there could be no very great extension of the zone of house building. As a consequence, there was congestion, rents were constantly raised, and there was much agitation of the people. In the year 48 B. C. the praetor, Marcus Caelius Rufus, enacted a law that released tenants of a year's rent. It is not known what success this had. But the privilege was renewed by Caesar and later by Emperor Augustus, with the restriction that the rent edict should refer only to habitations the rental of which, in Rome, did not exceed 2,000 sesterces, and in smaller towns not 500. Juvenal complains that for the rent one had to pay in Rome for a wretched dwelling, one could obtain a magnificent villa with a garden in the provinces. They could not think of an extension of the Forum for the simple reason that the surrounding houses would have to be expropriated, which in view of prices of real estate would have meant an enormous expenditure. As old as the housing problem itself is also the effort to meet it by preventing the arbitrary raising of rents by the landlords. Thus the early popes proceeded most radically in combating such exorbitant Julius II and Paul III became known for such action. Under Pope Alexander III a decree was issued requiring the reduction of the rent of a habitation decree of the year 124 forbade all proprietors of houses and stores in Rome, no matter how the lease read, under any pretext to drive the tenant into the street, least of all for non-payment of rent.

HOW HIST'RY IS WRITTEN

"Velhagen und Klasing's Monatshefte" is a high class, much read monthly magazine published in Berlin. In a recent number a "Professor" publishes a study, illustrated with numerous photos, on "German Metz." At the conclusion of the article occurs the following truly German passage:

"A significant fact, in which every good German will readily see a happy omen, happened in November, 1918, after the surrender of the place. The general who was to ride at the head of the enemy troops entering the town fell from his horse. The Frenchmen say: 'The horse, scared by the formidable acclamations of that triumphant day, started aside and threw off his rider.' But the old Metzians, our friends, who witnessed the accident, said to me, 'He was drunk.'"

And this refers to General Mangin.

ARE WE GOING BACK

In "L'Illustration" Paul Bourget studies the evidence in contemporary life that tends to show retrogression instead of progress. He says:

"M. Ferrero rightly advances the axiom that a civilization demands the unanimous recognition of a principle of authority, and, pointing out the disappearance of such a principle in Europe, he concludes that the actual crisis evident to everybody is not an accident. M. Bainville, who more particularly considers the relations of the states to each other, denounces as an stable relation of order in the external relation of these states, order in their internal affairs. May a disciple of Bajazet who has devoted all his effort to the analyses of morals be permitted to point out as a sign of re-appearance in our modern world of a spirit of cruelty which betrays all the conjectures of the apostles of progress?"

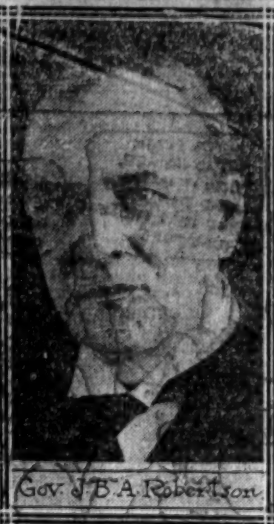

"See how this spirit of cruelty is turned loose in Russia, which the Bolsheviks are not satisfied with transforming into a laboratory of a monstrous ideological experiment."

M. Gourget shows the harshness of the struggles that desolate Europe. Even in France the traces "of an invasion of this spirit of cruelty" is observed in the multiplication of bloody facts and the ferocity of the polemics inviting the people to "direct action." "Baleful indices of retrogression. May they be only passing. . . . Other indices of renaissance authorize us to think that France, called by Daudet 'the first born of European civilization' will also, if need be, be the last defender."

WHAT'S TO BECOME OF 'EM?

Tristan da Cunha is the general name for a group of three small volcanic islands belonging to Great Britain, situated in the South Atlantic, about 2,000 miles west of the Cape of Good Hope and about 4,000 miles northeast of Cape Horn. Tristan, the largest and northernmost island, has an area of sixteen square miles, is circular in form, about seven miles in diameter, and has a volcanic cone (7,640 feet).

Oklahoma Governor Faces Trial On Bribery Charge

GOVERNOR J. B. A. Robertson, of Oklahoma, charged with accepting a bribe, will face trial in the Oklahoma District Court on April 17. Twelve other defendants, indicted by a Grand Jury following an investigation into the failure of the State Bank of Commerce, also will go to trial.

usually capped with snow, in the center. It sometimes happens that Tristan da Cunha remains six months, ten months, a year without receiving news from any part of the world.

The islands were discovered in 1506 by the Portuguese admiral Tristan (or more correctly Tristao) da Cunha, after whom they are named, during a voyage to India, but it was not until the nineteenth century that the islands were permanently inhabited. One day an American named Lambert, "State of Maine, mariner and explorer," landed in Tristan and declared himself sovereign and sole possessor of the group (which he renamed Islands of Refreshment). "I have made up my mind," he wrote, "to prepare for myself and my family a home where I shall be able to live without the difficulties that have constantly troubled me and to procure for us a property that will insure us forever the means of living and preserve us from common misfortunes."

Jonathan Lambert had many imitators. He arrived in 1810. In 1816 the island had already counted seventy-two inhabitants. It counted eighty in 1850, and 100 in 1908. According to the latest news the Tristan population has increased to 180 persons, men, women and children, and . . . pastor included. Incidentally, Lambert's sovereignty was short lived, as he was drowned in May, 1820, while out fishing.

Tristan da Cunha has no history. It knows neither industry nor commerce, nor war. It has no neighbors who envy it. There is no government. The people manage their affairs without any laws, the project once entertained of providing them with a formal constitution being deemed unnecessary. Nothing, or almost nothing, would be known about the customs of these Robinsons if, in the year 1902, an advertisement in a London paper had not signalled the condition of religion! Thereupon an Anglican pastor, the Rev. Mr. Barrow, decided to go there with his wife and a servant. It took them six months from Southampton to reach the island. They remained there three years, and Mrs. Barrow has left an excellent narrative of their visit.

In this way it was learned that those Robinsons, even if they did not consider themselves very happy, seemed to fear that they would be even less happy if they deserted this island. In 1908 the majority for the second time refused to desert the island though offered allotments of land in Cape Colony.

But an incident has just occurred that may upset their life. A cable from Rio de Janeiro tells of the arrival on the island of a new pastor who brought with him a wireless apparatus. Henceforth Tristan da Cunha may know everything, of the war, and the peace and the conference.

A HOSPITAL FOR PLANTS

A hospital for plants is the latest device, designed by an ingenious Englishman, for the aid and comfort of lovers of flowers, who are often distressed at sight of their favorite plants sailing and dying from maladies for which they know no cure. When a sick plant is brought to the hospital it is immediately examined and sent to the room prepared for its case. If it is suffering from a cold it is tended with heat; if it has become anemic from an excess of solar rays, it goes through a freezing treatment. The unwholesome branches are removed, while those that are anemic are fed.

It seems that certain plants are very nervous. Some easily get neurasthenic, while their neighbors show undeniable symptoms of hysteria. But special managements permit the application to each of them of the treatment it requires.

THE DANGER OF SUNSET

The death at Funchal of the Emperor Charles, who succumbed to broncho-pneumonia, caused great astonishment for it was supposed that in the warm atmosphere of Madeira people did not die from such affections, but were cured of them.

The action of the sun is, however, not uniformly beneficent, and many physicians distrust its last rays when it is disappearing on the horizon. It is well known that in warm countries people provide against the sudden lowering of the temperature which then occurs.

Thus, in all churches in Rome they sing the Angelus an hour before sunset to warn all those outdoors to take the necessary precautions.

No New Stars In County Cricket

A writer in a London contemporary bemoans the fact that the present cricket season has not yet introduced us to a new star among the ranks of professional players. The season is already rich in exceptionally fine batting and bowling achievements. But who are the men who accomplished them? he asks. They are the men who have long since, as years count, lost the first flush of youth, and in the vast majority of cases are the veterans who were already famous 10, 15, 20 nearly a quarter of a century ago. I need only recite a few names in proof. Some of the best batting feats of the month have come from bats of John Gunn (aged 46), Makepeace (39), Hobbs (39), J. H. King (48), F. E. Woolley (35), Russell (35), Oldrod (34), Holmes (34), P. Perrin (46), and

Calls Tutchuns Curs Of China

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 5.—Dr. Paul Monroe, who made an extensive tour in China on educational matters last winter, writes in this month's American Review of Reviews under the caption of "What is Happening in China," an article that seems to be primarily meant for the enlightenment of the American public on the more simple phases of Chinese politics, but is not without interest to some of the "old China hands."

In treating of the policy-installed conflict between General Wu Peifu and General Chang Tso-lin, Dr. Monroe says: "Chinese political conditions, judged by Western standards, are difficult to understand. However, if the Westerner will study various features of the situation in the light of origins in Western government, the problem will appear much simpler. The present conflict is not a sectional strife, like the Civil War in the United States, for, though there is an existing Southern Republic, there is no division of interests or even of views between the masses of people in the two sections."

NOT CIVIL WAR

"It is not an economic conflict, as in Russia, it is not a partisan conflict, as in Ireland. It can hardly be termed a civil war, since each party claims to be struggling for the unification of China and that when successful it will call a convention to bring about that unification. It is more nearly a struggle between feudal barons, using antiquated methods for getting modern results."

In treating of the policy inaugurated by Yuan Shih-kai of practically bribing the provincial governors to let him carry on without molestation from them, Dr. Monroe sees in it nothing but a modernised feudal system. He says:

"Meanwhile the second unfavorable factor developed through this policy of Yuan Shih-kai. The provincial military governors become conscious of their strength and of their influence over the central government; they built up local standing armies which became personal possessions, or at least owed only personal or local allegiance. The system which has developed during the last six or seven years differs little from that of a medieval feudal system."

TUTCHUNS FIRMLY IN SADDLE
The local military governors of Tutchuns now collect, and control the local revenues, although these are nominally under the control of the civil governor. Out of these revenues have been built up small standing armies of a paid soldiery. In several instances where the Tutchun has possessed unusual powers of leadership and administration, he has come to exercise control over two or three provinces.

"Of these the two outstanding ones are those of the present conflict, General Chang Tso-lin, governor of the three Manchurian Provinces, and Governor Wu Peifu, of Hunan, who has recently extended his influence throughout the Yangtze Valley. To these should probably be added General Chen Chiung-ming, of Canton, who, through co-operation with Sun Yat-sen, extended his control over the two provinces of the south, Kwangtung and Kwangsi."

"The patriotic pretenses of the Tutchuns are commented on in his article also. 'One obstacle to the understanding of the problem by the outsider is the fact that all of these Tutchuns claim the same patriotic purposes, each of them holds that the local Tutchun is an evil, that China should have a strong central government; that the power of the disturbing Tutchuns should be suppressed. ALL CLAIM HIGH PATRIOTISM'

Each claims that he is working with this high patriotic purpose in view and that only through his success can this purpose be consummated. Whether in truth this is a fact, or that each is working either to make himself a national dictator or simply to increase his local power as with

"Caveman" Stuff No Hit With Girl

WHEN John Tarzoo, son of a wealthy importer of Constantinople, met Miss Helen Wurtzbach in October, 1920, she was librarian at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston. He implored her to go to Turkey with him and became so insistent she fled to Chicago, where he followed her and sought to force her, she said, by threats of death, to go. She had him arrested, and U. S. Immigration officials are considering deporting him.

The remaining Tutchuns, who are content with provincial authority, is difficult to say. Subsequent conduct alone will tell the story. By popular consent the better man has won.

"Whether the period of the feudal overlordship of these provincial governors will be replaced through the development of a stronger national government, based on a new constitution and a new patriotism, remains to be seen. If Wu Peifu can deliver this, as he promises to do and it he will then eliminate himself or become the needed strong man operating through parliamentary coance, he will become the present-day savior of China."

Obituary

FREDERICK DUFFANGER

Reports from London carry the news of the death there at the age of 82 of Mr. Frederick Duffanger, who years ago was a prominent commercial figure in Far Eastern centers. Mr. Duffanger, after learning tea in a broker's office in Mincing Lane, went out in the 'sixties of last century to Gilman & Co., Pootung. He left Gilman's to join Adamson, Bell & Co., Yokohama, about 1870, and was manager of their branch there. He stayed at that post until 1882, when he went home, and, after a short holiday, joined the London office of Adamson, Bell & Co. He was with them until he joined Dodwell, Carill & Co., now Dowell & Co., Ltd., where he was former manager, in May, 1891, to take up Adamson, Bell & Co.'s business. He retired from Dodwell & Co., Ltd., in February of last year, but has not lived long to enjoy his leisure. Mr. Duffanger remained to the last his interest in matters pertaining to China and Japan, and his death is much regretted by a large circle of friends. He leaves a widow to mourn his loss.

MR. L. A. LUBECK

Mr. Luis Adolpho Lubeck, one of the most prominent members of the Portuguese community of Shanghai, died yesterday at his home on North Szechuen Road, at the age of 63. He had been suffering for some time past from paralysis of the brain as the result of overstudy, and was confined to his bed for about a week prior to his death.

The late Mr. Lubeck was born in Macao on August 25, 1859, and was educated at the St. Joseph's Seminary, where he distinguished himself in his studies in English, French, Latin, History, Literature, etc. He came to Shanghai in 1873 and joined the firm of Russell & Co., a bookkeeper, later signing for the firm. After this he studied up fifteen years later he took up responsible positions with Messrs. Ballard and Hunter and Messrs. Alex. Ross & Co.

In 1882 he married Anna Joaquina Tavares, the daughter of one of the most distinguished Portuguese families of Shanghai, with whom he had a son and four daughters. One of the latter is the wife of Commander Jono Gregorio Fernandes, who recently was Consul-General for Portugal at Hongkong.

Mr. Lubeck was well known for his literary achievements, and has left several volumes which he wrote, both in poetry and prose, which should prove of great value to the coming generation. He was very highly respected and esteemed by his compatriots for his honesty of character and benevolence, and for the interest he took in the education of the younger generation who will have occasion to regret his demise.

In 1881 he founded the now prosperous and magnanimous mutual provident association called the Associação Macaense de Socorro Mutuo d' Shanghai, the aim of which has been to give help to members out of employment or without means. He remained president of the association for upwards of 20 years, and only this year resigned.

"Told in the Hills"

"If You Know How to Pray, Pray for Me Tonight—for Me and the Other Men in That Death Trap!"

Then this despised "squaw man" was off to save from an Indian massacre the men who had shamefully jailed him for a common horse theft!

Only the girl knew his heart—she and the brother for whose sin he had buried himself in the West.

But when his great day came, his defamers found that his "black" soul was white and his "yellow" blood, spilled for them, was red—red.

"Told in the Hills" is a mighty epic of the West of the pioneers, of scout and gold hunter and roving Indian, of the West as it was in other times and never will be again.

The novel has thrilled countless thousands. Now Robert Warwick, with a brilliant supporting cast including Ann Little, Wanda Hawley, Tom Forman, Monte Blue, Eileen Percy, Hart Hoxie and Guy Oliver, has given the story life in a great screen masterpiece. Don't miss it.

The Economic Interdependence
Of The World

On the other day Andre Tardieu made an able speech to the French Chamber of Deputies in which he said that the English-speaking nations were driven by "economic materialism." He had frankly admitted the fact that France is most interested in the consolidation of political power in Central and Eastern Europe, Britain and America are more interested in the restoration of trade.

The opposition between these two interests explains much of what is going on in Europe today, says a correspondent of The New York World, who goes on to point out that there is a profound truth both in the French and the Anglo-American view, and in both a certain one-sidedness. Undoubtedly in England America there is a tendency to be overimpatient at the wild idea being sowed by the liberated nations. Their jingoism, their boastfulness, take up so much of our attention that we are inclined to forget how necessary it is to take a step it was to accomplish their liberation. Our interest in a revival of commerce somewhat obscures our sympathy for their interest in the recovery of their national unity.

But if it is necessary to make the criticism of ourselves it is equally fair to add that France is not a disinterested friend of all suffering nationalities, as M.
Tardieu suggests. France is very sensitive for Polish aspirations as against Germany but quite complacent about Lithuanian and Belarusian aspirations against Russia; she is strong for the Rumanians who were oppressed in the old Hungary but silent about the Hungarians oppressed in the new Rumania. One could add many other examples to show that France is not so much the friend of nationalism in general as of certain allied and friendly nations in particular.

Thus it would be easy for a biased critic to debate the self-consciousness both of the French and the Anglo-American view.
But it seems to us by far the simpler thing to say that a French statesman has said some very important things about the principle in this business as Mr. Lloyd George's remark the other day

The new phase is the economic interdependence of Europe. No modern nation can exist by itself; it is dependent upon other nations, whether neighboring or remote.

Some of these sentences sound like a commonplace. But If you begin to apply them to the facts in the world today they are living truth.

To those, for example, who think that the whole reparation is a simple moral question of the assaulting paying his victim, the interdependence of the world is, one might hope, made plain by the bankers' meeting at Paris.

At that meeting in the place of honor sits an American. With him sits a Dutchman and a Japanese. And they are discussing how Germany can pay France reparations.

Or consider this: France, says M. Tardieu, is interested in the national independence of Poland.

But what is the position of Poland?
She lies between devastated Russia and bankrupt Germany and her currency is 50 marks to the cent. One incidental result is that Poland has to put up barriers against the imports of France's main exports because she cannot afford to pay for luxuries.

Now those who believe in acting on the theory of economic interdependence have a right to say to M. Tardieu that purely political independence is no real independence at all; and that when the new nations really begin to prosper again then real security will exist. None more than the small states need the revival of commerce. None suffers more from mere political nationalism than they. For, after all, there is little starvation in England and America where the gospel of economic interdependence is being preached.

There is an enormous amount of starvation in those parts of Europe where Governments are refusing to practise that gospel.
We may preach it because of our self-interest, but they ought to practise it because of their self-interest. They will do themselves a higher favor than by adopting the theory.

We do not mean to imply, however, that the gospel of interdependence is practised by America.
Far from it. The farmers and the bankers, labor and the traders preach it. Even the Administration has been heard to preach it. But it is not practised in Washington. The direct opposite is practised. At a time when every informal person knows that economic recovery is the most urgent matter, the highest product of our economic statecraft is the Forney-McCumber tariff. While that monstrous consumes the time of Congress we have nothing further to say about Polish or Russian finance or about the economic folly of Azerbaijan or the Tartar Republic. We are ready to believe that folly is "international."

Correspondence

PROGRESS IN PALESTINE

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Dear Sir:—Apropos of the allegations made recently in the House of Commons by Sir W.
Joynton Hicks, a noted anti-Zionist, reported by Reuter and published in your today's issue, that the "Zionists aim at the complete control of the Palestine Government," permit me to give your readers some extracts from a speech delivered on May 27 last, at a public demonstration held in Leeds by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, the Zionist leader, at which the Lord Mayor presided.

Dr. Weizmann said:—

"In the last three years since Palestine had definitely come under the British flag, £4,000,000 had been spent on the up-building of the country, at a time when the Jewish population of the country was economically and politically broken down. They had built 50 miles of roads, two or three small railways, laid new telegraph and telephone lines, built new bridges and developed what had been undeveloped districts. They had planted 750,000 new trees, and 2,000,000 seedlings in the nurseries. They had a system of education by which they developed 137 schools of different types, in which 13,000 children were taught by 500 teachers; and on education they had spent over £100,000 a year.

The Palestine Government's expenditure on education of all the non-Jewish communities was slightly less than that, and the Jewish communities formed only ten percent of the whole. On sanitation and medical relief they had spent £100,000 a year, and that work was benefiting equally all members of the communities of Palestine. All this was done without hurt to the legiti-mate interests of the remainder of the population. It had been a stagnant country; now it was going ahead.

There were political difficulties. A considerable section of the Arab population, perhaps, was hostile to the establishment of the Jewish National Home, but through misapprehension and misconception he thought. The Jews did not aim at political dominance over any other section of the population; neither were they to be dominated. They were living under a British Mandate, and they were confident that Great Britain and the League of Nations were perfectly capable of holding the balance evenly.

It was the destiny of the Jews and the destiny of the Arabs to co-operate. They had done so before, and they could do so again. He hoped and trusted they would go forward always under the wing of the great British Empire. If that were not possible in consequence of the opposition of the adversaries of the Zionist Movement it would be a great setback, perhaps for generations, but the idea of a National Home would always survive."

The foregoing frank, lucid and straightforward statement does not support the allegations of Sir W. Joynton Hicks in any way.
It is strange indeed that at this late day the Rutenberg concession which aims at harnessing the waters of the Jordan river for the purpose of generating and distributing electric light and power in Palestine should be subjected to uncalled for criticism. The project has been described in the British House of Lords, by the Government spokesman, the Duke of Sutherland, as "the most practical, substantial contribution so far made by Jews to the restoration of prosperity in Palestine."

The whole scheme has been examined with the greatest care by the Department of the Palestine Government who are particularly concerned and also by the technical advisors of the Secretary of State for the Colonies and it is generally agreed that from an engineering point of view the scheme is thoroughly sound."

The present wave of criticism which is designed to oppose the British policy in Palestine is based upon sinister designs calculated to hurt the Jewish national aspirations in their present forward march to their goal. The ratification of the Palestine mandate is expected to come up for discussion at the next meeting of the Council of the League of Nations on the 16th instant. The upshot of which will be awaited with eagerness and impatience.
There is no gaining away from the fact that certain groups of influential men are eager to induce Great Britain to repudiate or qualify the Balfour Declaration, a promise which was deliberately made before the world. All friends of England, humanity and civilization hope that from such a great dishonor may England be saved. It is indeed a critical period through which we are passing. But we Jews have undying faith in England. As our late immortal leader, Dr. Herzl, said at the Fourth Zionist Congress held in London, on August 13, 1900:—

"England—mighty England, free England—with its world-embracing outlook, will understand us and our aspirations.
With England as a starting point we may be sure that the Zionist idea will soar further and higher than ever before." I am etc.

FINES VS. IMPRISONMENT

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir:—The account of the meeting on June 24 of the International Anti-Opium Association is interesting; but it appears that the association has lost sight of one very effective measure which might be suggested to the Mixed Court, that is, instead of to impose fines varying from $5.00 to $200.00, which sums are to the rich traffickers and rich smokers nothing, to inflict imprisonment on all who have a part in the smuggling of dealing in opium. It can easily be seen that the minor sum of $200.00 is only a drop in the bucket compared with the enormous amount of profit that can be made in a deal such as that of Kwok Yih-sheng's. Should Kwok be so fortunate as to be able to carry through one or two deals in the future, he will be "compensated" for the loss.

Another measure that might be taken is to follow the rules of the French Municipal Council of this Port. Two years ago, in spite of fines and confiscation, opium traffic was going on practically in broad daylight in the French Concession. The authorities were non-plussed. However, they at last published a notice that where opium was found in a place, all the household effects thereof, irrespective of whether they are the lessor's or the lessee's, would be confiscated, and that the house would be sealed for a period of three months. Now the French Concession here is almost entirely cleared of this drug. Yours very truly,

J.P.O.Y.

INDIA BELIEVES SHE CAN RIVAL U. S. IN PRODUCTION OF COTTON

Bombay, (By mail).—The spirit of optimism prevalent in Europe during the last month or two in regard to the commencement of a pick-up in trading activities in general has reached India. It is, however, more than a spirit, for there are distinct signs of a commercial revival not only in this city of Bombay, but also in Calcutta, Madras, Colombo and the other big business centers of the peninsula. The old "all is lost" sentiment has disappeared.

Certainly there has not been a late much improvement in exchange. India is still working at only a fraction over the 1s. 4d. line. But trade is certainly looking up. Lancashire reports increased inquiries and orders from India for piecegoods, and this is a good sign in itself, in addition to being a symbol showing the way things are moving generally.

Doubtless many will scoff at it, but it is being upheld over the here that if the methods of producing raw cotton in India were placed upon a businesslike basis and full advantage taken of all facilities in this direction, this country would in course of time become a serious rival of the United States. Here is the case from India's viewpoint. Why should India not produce as much raw cotton annually as the United States? And why should the output not compare favorably with the American blends? The United States comes first as the world's cotton producer, with a latest returned total of just over 80 lakhs (that is, 8,000,000 bales). India comes third on the list, and the last returns showed an output of forty lakhs of bales. This means that before Indian producers can talk at all they must double their output. It looks a big problem, and so it is.

WORK UNDER DIFFICULTIES
But the point which, perhaps, escapes notice is that in India growers are working under many difficulties which, when surmounted, will give them a bigger and improved crop yearly. In India, as in the States, there are our long staple areas and short staple areas. But here the ryots (the native farmers) have the delightful habit of forwarding cotton grown in short staple areas to long staple towns. From thence the cotton goes to market, mainly to Bombay, and is accepted as the product of the district from which it is booked. This, of course, is obviously dishonest, and one has to live in the country to realize the amount of common cheating under this head that goes on month in and month out.

Another favorite dodge of the cultivators is to mix the staples, long with short. The mixture comes to market as long stapled varieties. When or before the raw material reaches the mill the fraud is discovered, and the consequence is that Indian cotton on the whole is discredited, and districts which have built up a reputation for strong, healthy and long staple fiber lose whatever reputation they possessed. The above and other mean tricks are to be checked by the enforcement of the cotton transport bill which was introduced into the Indian Legislative Assembly at the last session.

Then more money is to be spent by the British and the Indian governments on cotton research in this country, great efforts are to be made to educate the ryot up to the value of cultivating cotton by modern and improved methods, and new areas are to be surveyed for the cultivation of the raw crop. There are signs of a world shortage in cotton. America can speak better on this point than India. Whatever the position is at the present there are indications that a market can be found for all the cotton that India is capable of producing, whether it be short staple varieties for her own and Continental markets or whether it be long staples for the English markets. And the question of output is simply governed by the number of experiments conducted on this country's millions of acres of cultivated and waste land.

Another cotton point which is of interest although directly it does

not affect American activities.
This is the intention of certain Lancashire spinning and weaving firms to run their own mills in India so as to hold what they can of the piecegoods trade. Before the war India took 40 percent of Lancashire's piecegoods, mainly of low counts. The increased import duties of last year, when cotton goods were placed under a 11 percent levy, certainly hit the English manufacturers in no light manner.
Gandhi's Swadeshi campaign also struck a blow at Lancashire's activities in the Indian market.

On the top of this movement on the part of piecegoods manufacturers two world famous firms of English coachbuilders, John Harper and Co. and Barker and Co. intend opening joint workshops and offices in this country. These two instances of British enterprise are mentioned to illustrate what steps are being taken to counteract the protectionist spirit in India. As educating influences grow, so does the dogma that India's salvation lies in maintaining a strictly protectionist attitude. Despite the arrest of Gandhi and a fall in the non-co-operation propaganda, at no time was the determination that India should be reserved for exploitation by Indians alone more strong than at present.

In all the above lies a moral for American manufacturers who produce to any extent for the Indian markets. The practice of employing an Indian agent is a "washout." Nothing under direct representation is good enough to hold interests in this country. British firms are extensively adopting the practice of sending their own men out to India to manage things, and American concerns will have to follow suit, or else lose business to the Britisher, the Japanese or the German.

BANKING OPPORTUNITIES
The American banking world too should not neglect Indian openings. Much is heard of financing Europe and especially the countries virtually bankrupted as a result of the World War. India is in a more fortunate position than those countries, and her loan risks are not so great. Moreover, her internal and London-raised funds stand well in the exchange of the world. So she has a lot in her favor as a borrowing country.

She is a country ever developing on Western lines, a country full of possibilities. Money is certainly required in many directions at present for sound industrial enterprises, and here should lie opportunities for American bank communities.

The Sun Not Merely A Camp-Fire For Man

BY GARRETT P. SERVIS (Eminent Astronomer And Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest)emanating from the sun? Is it probably electrical, or is it a principle unknown to science?
F. A. B.What is the heat-producing energy that you speak of as everything back to electricity as a common source. If this is correct it is interesting and important, but, after all, not very illuminating as long as we don't know what electricity itself is, but only know some of its effects and a little about the way it acts within our field of observation. But take place, in view of what everybody knows nowadays about the transformation of electrical waves into sound. The waves used in radio communication (although those which produce light and heat, they are enormously large) are believed to travel through the

"ether" with the same stupendous velocity that the others possess, and they have other resemblances the hypothetical "ether of space" with what, mathematically, appear that, at bottom, they are of the
as minute waves, transmitted with prodigious velocity (186,300 miles per second), and capable, when they encounter matter like that composing the earth and the other planets and bodies surrounding the sun, of setting the molecules of such matter into minute vibrations, whose effects appear to us as what we call heat and light.

There ought not to be any difficulty for anybody in understanding how such a transformation can
body knows nowadays about the
transformation of electrical waves
into sound. The waves used in
radio communication (although
heat, they are enormously large)
are believed to travel through the
"ether" with the same stupendous
velocity that the others possess,
and they have other resemblances
the hypothetical "ether of space"
with what, mathematically, appear
per second), and capable, when these latter waves are by no means the only, and they may not be even the most important, waves sent forth from the solar globe.

The phenomena of the aurora borealis, and others, make it probable that streams of electrical energy are continually poured out by the sun along with, or in addition to, the radiations that become perceptible to us when they are turned into light and heat. Suppose that there should be among these waves of the kind that we use with our radio instruments—which seems not unlikely—might not a solar giant speak to us with a space conquering voice, if only we had receivers capable of transforming the messages into comprehensible sounds? At least, might we not hear the "roar of the sunspots," as Thomas A. Edison once tried to do?

So far is the energy of the sun from being all, or nearly all, expressed in light and heat that we find many indications that solar energy takes forms upon, around, and perhaps in, the earth that are not directly recognizable by us, though they play a great part in the economy of our globe, affecting both animate and inanimate things.
Some of these less familiar forms of the solar energy science is slowly and partially revealing to us.

For instance, take the ultra-violet waves, lying at and beyond the short-wave end of the solar spectrum. The "biological relations" of these waves have recently been studied by Messrs. F. E. Lutz, of the American Museum of Natural History, and F. K. Richtmyer, of Cornell University, who have revealed very curious and suggestive relations between certain flies (Drosophila melanogaster), and the ultra-violet rays, which have a very powerful influence over the activity of the flies, even when the intensity of the rays is reduced so far that they lie entirely beyond human visual perception.

As these investigators suggest, such facts have a very interesting bearing on the problem of the sense perceptions of insects, and of the biological relations between insects and flowers, for "flowers may be ultra violet, as well as red, yellow, and so on."

Then a flower garden would be a wonder world if we could visit it armed with insect senses! The discovery of such seemingly isolated facts, of apparent interest to scientists alone, has led to great advances of knowledge. We can hardly form an idea of the difference that they may exist between the impression that the sun makes upon us and upon some of the other animals of the earth, whose needs it serves by means of rays that have no concern for man, and to whose existence we are blind and insensible. When human astronomy has exhausted knowledge about the sun, insect astronomy might open a new library about it.

There is at present a tendency to supplement, or even to discard, Helmholtz's theory of the source of solar energy—a theory based only on gravitation—and to inquire whether radio-activity may not be the principal source. It is thought that the sun has already lived much longer than the compression process could have kept it active.
